The President and Temperance.

President Roosevelt made an address at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., a few weeks ago under the auspices of the Catholic Temperance Union. Wilkes-Barre is in the center of the coal mining region of eastern Pennsylvania, and the audience to which the president spoke was made up largely of miners. If they came to hear and see the president out of mere curiosity, they heard sound and practical doctrine, for the president had nothing to say about the tariff or the Philippines, but much to say about sobriety, thrift, cleanliness, honesty and such homely virtues. And his words were fitly spoken, for there is no class that needs indoctrination in temperance more than the one that composed the majority of Mr. Roosevelt's audience at Wilkes-Barre. And this is what the president said:

In the last analysis the factor most influential in determining any man's success must ever be the sum of that man's own qualities, of his knowledge, foresight, thrift and courage. Whatever tends to increase his self-respect, whatever tends to help him overcome the temptations with which all of us are surrounded, is of benefit not only to him, but to the whole community. No one society can do more to help the wage-worker than such a temperance society as that which I am now addressing. It is of incalculable consequence to his wife and children, for it is a hard and cruel fate that in this life of ours the sins of the man are often visited most heavily upon those whose welfare should be his one special care. For the drunkard, for the man who loses his job because he cannot control or will not control his desire for liquor, and for vicious pleasure, we have a feeling of anger and contempt mixed with pity, but for his unfortunate wife and little ones we feel only pity, and that of the deepest and tenderest kind.

Everything possible should be done to encourage the growth of that spirit of self-respect, self-restraint, self-reliance, which, if it only grows enough, is certain to make all those in whom it shows itself move steadily upward toward the highest standard of American citizenship. It is a proud and responsible privilege to be citizens of this great self-governing nation, and each of us needs to keep steadily before his eyes the fact that he is wholly unfit to take part in the work of governing others unless he can first govern himself. He must stand up manfully for his own rights, he must respect the rights of others, he must obey the law, and he must try to live up to those rules of righteousness which are above and behind all laws.

All of which is sound, sensible and reasonable. But it is only fair to inquire whether the government has any right to stand sponsor for an institution that destroys "the spirit of self-respect, self-restraint and self-reliance." The president's words seem like mockery when one remembers that the thing he was indirectly denouncing with all the energy of his earnest soul is endorsed and protected by the government of which he is the chief official. If intemperance is bad for the miners of Pennsylvania, then the thing that makes it possible is bad, and if that is so, then the authority that protects the thing by licensing it is bad; and the responsibility for the intemperance of the miner is traceable not only to the miner for his failure to exercise a due measure of self-control, but to the government that throws its protecting shield over the whiskey business, and participates in its profits. We hope that, when the president talks temperance again, he will allow the logic of the situation to lead him to a clear view of the facts in the case, and that his natural honesty and hatred of evil will induce him to deliver his soul on the most deplorable of all modern iniquities—the legalized liquor traffic.—Copied from the Epworth Herald.

EAST BARRE.

At the East Barre opera house Saturday evening, Sept. 9, there will be a social dance under the auspices of Gauthier's orchestra. Admission 35 cents. Dancing from 8 to 12.

Are You Engaged?

Engaged people should remember that after marriage many quarrels can be avoided, by keeping their digestions in good condition with Electric Bitters. S. A. Brown of Bennington, S. C., says:

"For years my wife suffered intensely from dyspepsia, complicated with a torpid liver, until she lost her strength and vigor and became a mere wreck of her former self. Then she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy." The Red Cross Pharmacy and Parlor Drug Store sell and guarantee them at 50c per bottle.

Gen. Sherman and the Boy.

Gen. Sherman once had occasion to stop at a country home where a tin basin and a roller towel on the back porch suited for the family's ablutions. For two mornings the small boy of the household watched in silence the visitor's efforts at making a toilet under the unfavorable auspices, but when on the third day the toothbrush, nail file, whisk boron, etc., had been duly used and returned to their places in the traveler's grip, he could suppress his curiosity no longer, so boldly put the question: "Say, mister, air you always that much trouble to yo'self?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup seems especially adapted to the needs of the children. Pleasant to take, soothing in its influence. It is the remedy of all remedies for every form of throat and lung disease.

Ten thousand demons gnawing away at one's vitals couldn't be much worse than the tortures of itching piles. Yet there's a cure. Doan's Ointment never fails.

Burdock Blood Bitters gives a man a clear head, an active brain, a strong, vigorous body—makes him fit for the battle of life.

Sour Stomach

"I need Cascarets and feel like a new man. I have been a sufferer from dyspepsia and sour stomach for the last two years. I have been taking medicine and other drugs, but could find no relief. Only for a short time. I will recommend Cascarets to my friends as the only thing for indigestion and sour stomach and to keep the bowels in good condition. They are very nice to eat."

"Down by the Sea."

A special feature of the presentation, "Down by the Sea," the successful comedy drama which comes to The Barre Opera House, Sept. 8, is the celebrated "Queenie," the largest acting St. Bernard dog in the world. She has been imported from the famous English kennel, St. George, and is valued at $2,000. For the past three months she has been under the personal supervision of Monsieur La Mont, the famous animal trainer, who has succeeded in training her to interpret the role allotted to her in a manner that called forth many favorable comments from a most critical audience at a recent rehearsal in New York city for newspaper men. Everyone present conceded her to be the most intelligent talented performing dog that has ever appeared before the public.

Since joining the companies Queenie has become the self-appointed guardian of Miss Viola Savoy, the clever four-year-old actress who takes a prominent part in the production and escorts this fascinating little lady to and from the theatre and displays a special delight in carrying her grip.

Ikey and Abey.

The company presenting Edward R. Salter's newest musical comedy entitled "Ikey and Abey" is a large and exceptionally strong one, and among its members are several favorite comedians who have helped materially in the success of a number of the Salter productions. This latest effort of the versatile manager presents fun that is strictly up to the times, and as an effective laugh producer, it is doubtful if it can be equalled on the stage today. The costuming and scenic effects are ample and complete, and the plot allows of no introduction of clever specialties without spoiling the action of the piece. "Ikey and Abey" will be presented on Saturday evening at the Barre opera house.

Gave Himself Away.

Mr. Sportby had given it out that he was going to spend the day in the country and commune with nature.

"What sort of a day did you have, dear?" asked his wife that evening at dinner.

"Poor," was the absent minded reply. "Five favorites were beaten."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
